Chapter 01: Communicating at Work in the Age of AI

Multiple Choice

1. Which statement regarding communication skills in the workplace is correct?

- a. The COVID-19 pandemic has revealed the relative unimportance of good communication skills in the workplace.
- b. Communication skills often rank at the bottom of recruiters' wish lists.
- c. Superior communication skills will make you marketable in the workplace of the future regardless of economic climate.
- d. Today's workers communicate less, not more, since information technology and social media have swept the workplace.

ANSWER: c

RATIONALE: The COVID-19 pandemic forced an unprecedented expansion of remote work and accelerated the digital transformation of the workplace. In this hyperconnected and always-on environment, communication skills are critical.

55. Your friend Lavana comes to you for advice about a problem she is facing in the workplace. Lavana is friendly and outgoing, but at work, she tends to be too chatty and dominates conversations. Her coworkers have begun avoiding conversations with her, which makes collaboration difficult. What is the first piece of advice you would give Lavana to help resolve this conflict?

- a. Appear interested in what others have to say, even if you are not really listening.
- b. Remove other sounds so that her coworkers can better hear what she is saying.

- c. Stop talking.
- d. Seek out others in the workplace that better understand her communication style.

ANSWER: c

RATIONALE: Active listening skills are important to be successful in the workplace. People like Lavana, who are the brash chatty type who dominate conversations, should try to break the habit by letting others talk without interrupting. The first step is to stop talking and to listen to what others are saying.

- a. sharing economy
- b. automation
- c. gig economy
- d. anytime, anywhere availability

ANSWER: a

RATIONALE: This kind of disruptor in the labor market is referred to as the sharing economy, which relies on platforms that predominantly function via smartphone apps. Consider Uber or Lyft, the app-based ride-sharing platforms that have disrupted long-established business models. Similarly, Airbnb and Vrbo have disrupted the hospitality industry.

- a. Traveling abroad
- b. Noticing reflect reactions
- c. Talking to friends and family who know you best
- d. Spending time with people from other walks of life

ANSWER: c

RATIONALE: We are all shaped by our upbringing, and our beliefs may feel so normal that we don't realize they are cultural and learned until we encounter something different. If possible, travel or study abroad—or simply spend time with people from different walks of life. Learning to step outside yourself and notice your own reflex reactions, automatic thought patterns, and assumptions that are a result of how you were socialized is a powerful skill.

PURPOSE AND PERSPECTIVE OF THE CHAPTER

The purpose of this chapter is to provide students with an overview of business communication in the mobile, social, and digital age, and especially as artificial intelligence increasingly affects workplaces. First, we describe how communication skills fuel career success in a challenging digital age marketplace. Next, we explore the importance of listening and provide students with active listening techniques. Then, we discuss how effective nonverbal communication can help you build your credibility and advance your career, and provide students with tools for improving their nonverbal communication. We also describe the key dimensions of culture and how technology and social media shape intercultural communication. Finally, we explain how domestic diversity and global expansion have affected the workplace and identify strategies for enhancing intercultural effectiveness and communication across cultures.

CENGAGE SUPPLEMENTS

The following product-level supplements provide additional information that may help you in preparing your course. They are available in the Instructor Resource Center.

- Transition Guide (provides information about what's new from edition to edition)
- Educator's Guide (describes assets in the platform with a detailed breakdown of activities by chapter with seat time)
- PowerPoint (provides text-based lectures and presentations)
- Test Bank (contains assessment questions and problems)
- MindTap User Guide (provides information on how to navigate and use MindTap)

CHAPTER OUTCOMES

The following outcomes are addressed in this chapter:

- 1-1 Describe how communication skills can fuel career success in an uncertain world of work.
- 1-2 Name active listening skills.

- 1-3 Discuss how effective nonverbal communication can help you advance your career.
- 1-4 Explain the primary characteristics and key dimensions of culture.
- 1-5 Identify strategies for enhancing intercultural communication.

KEY TERMS

Ad hoc teams: Nontraditional project-based teams that disband after they accomplish their objectives; the opposite of standing teams.

Agentic AI: Machine learning models capable of solving problems with limited supervision.

Brand: How groups, organizations, and individuals present themselves in the virtual world.

Close-ended questions: Questions that require a choice among set answers.

Collectivism: Emphasizes membership in organizations, groups, and teams; it encourages acceptance of group values, duties, and decisions.

Context: The stimuli, environment, or ambience surrounding an event.

Credibility: Reputation.

Cultural convergence: A lessening of group differences and a trend toward greater global similarity, particularly in higher individualism and lower power distance.

Culture: The complex system of values, traits, morals, and customs shared by a society.

Emotional intelligence (EQ): A concept from a bestselling book by Daniel Coleman arguing that EQ is just as important as the intelligence quotient (IQ) for success; the ability to understand and manage our own emotions as well as the ability to understand and influence the emotions and behavior of others.

Empathetic listening: Listening in an effort to see the world through another's eyes, be less judgmental, and seek common ground.

Empathy: The ability to understand other people's perspectives and emotionally respond to their experiences.

Ethnocentrism: The belief in the superiority of one's own ethnic group.

Gig economy: A sector of the labor market that relies on free agents hired on a project basis or doing short-term independent work.

Groupthink: A reluctance to question the majority view.

High-context cultures: Cultures that assume the receiver of a message does not need much background information (such as those in China, Japan, and Middle Eastern countries).

Humility: Characterized by deep listening, respect for diverse views, and an openness to suggestions and feedback.

Hybrid work: A work week that consists of in-person and remote work.

Individualism: An attitude of independence and freedom from control.

Interpersonal skills, professional skills or social skills: A combination of communication, logical reasoning, critical-thinking, teamwork, and management skills.

Lag time or speech-thought differential: The difference between our rate of speaking and our rate of listening/thinking.

Linear logic: Thinking pattern used by low-context communicators; they proceed from Point A to Point B to Point C and finally arrive at a conclusion.

Low-context cultures: Cultures that depend little on the context of a situation and shared experience to convey their meaning (such as those in the United States, Scandinavia, and Germany).

Microcredentials: Short courses that certify a person's expertise in a particular area.

Mindful: Being fully present in an effort to build trust and gain respect.

Monochronic time (M-time): Time perceived as if it were running on a single, linear track.

Nonverbal communication: Includes eye contact, facial expression, body movements, time, space, territory, and appearance, and affects how a receiver interprets, or decodes, a message.

Open-ended questions: Questions without set answers.

People skills or soft skills: Powerful social skills employers expect.

Polychronic time (P-time): Time viewed as abundant and nonlinear.

Power distance: How people in different societies relate to more powerful individuals.

Prejudice: When a stereotype develops into a rigid attitude, based on erroneous beliefs or preconceptions, and leads to hurtful, even toxic, behaviors.

Professional skills, interpersonal skills or social skills: A combination of communication, logical reasoning, critical-thinking, teamwork, and management skills.

Resilience: The ability to rebound after setbacks.

Sharing economy: An economic model in which individuals rent or borrow assets owned by others through disrupting services such as Uber, Lyft, Bird, Lime, Spin, and Airbnb.

Smartphone apps: Software applications designed to work on mobile devices.

Social skills, professional skills, or interpersonal skills: A combination of communication, logical reasoning, critical-thinking, teamwork, and management skills.

Soft skills or people skills: Powerful social skills employers expect.

Speech-thought differential or lag time: The difference between our rate of speaking and our rate of listening/thinking.

Spiral logic: Thinking pattern used by high-context communicators; they circle around a topic indirectly, looking at it from many divergent viewpoints.

Standing teams: Traditional teams whose members don't change and who learn to work well together over time.

Stereotype: An oversimplified, rigid perception of a behavioral pattern or characteristic applied uncritically to groups—whether it be flattering or negative.

Tolerance: Being open-minded and receptive to new experiences and groups of people.

Upskilling: Continual, lifelong, on-the-job learning.

WHAT'S NEW IN THIS CHAPTER

The following elements are improvements in this chapter from the previous edition:

- Rewrote the chapter from the ground up to reflect the disruptive influence of generative artificial intelligence and automation as well as ongoing political and economic instability and its effects on the world of work.
- Highlighted throughout the need for resilience and adaptability in today's competitive workforce characterized by uncertainty over automation and the role of AI in potential future job losses.
- Presented the latest research arguing the continuing preeminence of writing, speaking, and other interpersonal skills even in the AI-driven workplace awaiting our students.
- Reiterated the need to protect one's personal brand, so that students would safeguard their reputation and credibility on social media.
- Integrated discussions and applications of AI tools throughout the chapter to impress upon students that writing skills remain important if they wish to benefit the most from AI and other digital tools.
- Drew on current statistics and examples to provide students with state-of-the-art practices in business and to offer advice on future-proofing their professional skill set.
- Provided at least 40 percent brand-new end-of-chapter activities, a new grammar/mechanics checkup, and recreated the Editing Challenge to reinforce student learning of key chapter concepts.
- Updated the Communication Workshop introducing students to job hunting in the digital age and exploring LinkedIn, the professional social networking tool.

CHAPTER OUTLINE

In the outline below, each element includes references (in parentheses) to related content. “CH.##” refers to the chapter objective, and “PPT Slide #” refers to the slide number in the PowerPoint deck for this chapter (provided in the PowerPoints section of the Instructor Resource Center). Introduce the chapter and use the Ice Breaker in the PPT (PPT Slide 2) if desired, and if one is provided for this chapter. Review learning outcomes for Chapter 1 (PPT Slide 3).

- I. Succeeding in a Dynamic Work Environment With Communication Skills (1-1, PPT Slides 4-17)
 - a. Rapid technological change, economic inequality, and political instability are reshaping the workplace, with AI both creating opportunities and displacing jobs.
 - b. Global crises such as pandemics, wars, and climate events quickly disrupt interconnected economies, businesses, and supply chains.
 - c. Today’s competitive job market rewards graduates who are proactive, adaptable, and technologically skilled.
 - d. Business communication skills—including listening, nonverbal communication, and intercultural competence—remain essential in modern workplaces.
 - e. Twenty-First-Century Skills and Career Success
 - i. Superior communication skills will make you marketable in the workplace of the future, regardless of the economic climate.
 - ii. AI and technological literacy, followed by creative thinking, resilience, flexibility, agility, curiosity, and lifelong learning are among the most desirable attributes in job seekers, ahead of management, leadership, problem-solving, and teamwork skills.
 - iii. You can learn how to communicate effectively.
 - f. Why Communication and Other Interpersonal Skills Matter
 - i. Even as business enterprises embrace AI, workers communicate more, not less, with the average American worker spending 17.5 hours a week on work e-mail alone.
 - ii. Half of employees and more than half of managers report they are overwhelmed and unproductive.
 - iii. To be successful, workers need essential twenty-first-century skills such as problem-solving, teamworking, written communication, initiative, strong work ethic, technical expertise, and verbal communication.
 - g. Safeguarding Your Career and Credibility

- i. Modern careers require adaptability and may involve multiple career changes over time.
- ii. How employees brand themselves, or present themselves in the virtual world, and their credibility, or reputation, may very well determine how successful their career will be.
- iii. Techies Communicate Too.
 - (1) Technical skills alone are insufficient because they are subject to massive change due to AI.
 - (2) Soft skills are desirable and transferable.
- iv. Many Grads Are Not Career-Ready.
 - (1) Many employers are so frustrated that 90 percent of them say they avoid hiring recent graduates.
 - (2) HR leaders cited the following as human skills essential to competition and future readiness:
 - (a) Communication skills (98 percent)
 - (b) willingness to learn (93 percent)
 - (c) collaboration (92 percent)
 - (d) creativity (90 percent)
 - (e) critical thinking (87 percent)
 - (3) Sizable numbers of recent graduates and young professionals report high levels of anxiety, depression, and other mental health challenges, and these struggles clash with employers' demands for resilience.
 - (4) Employees work remotely and depend on digital meeting tools; therefore, IT departments are much needed, and techs must possess people skills.
 - (5) Many employers said new-hires are not workplace ready, as only 56 percent of graduates possessed critical-thinking skills, and only 54 percent had adequate communication skills.
- v. Writing Is in Your Future.
 - (1) Regardless of the field you choose, you probably will be sending many digital messages. (Model Document 1.1 provides an example of professional e-mail messaging.)
- h. Zooming in on "Soft" Skills and Professionalism
 - i. Soft skills, people skills, or emotional intelligence are powerful social skills employers expect.
 - ii. Interpersonal skills or professional skills can be defined as a combination of collaboration, critical thinking, dependability, and time management.
 - iii. Projecting a professional image can make a real difference in helping you obtain the job of your dreams.

(Figure 1.1 reviews areas students can check to be sure they are projecting professionalism.)

- i. The Economic Benefit of Your Education
 - i. Fewer than half of adults in the United States expressed confidence in higher education.
 - ii. Yet, college graduates earn more, suffer less unemployment, and can choose from a wider variety of career options than workers without a college education.
 - iii. Graduates with a bachelor's degree or higher earn nearly three times as much as people with less than a high-school education and are more than three times less likely to be unemployed. (Figure 1.2 outlines the benefits of having a college education.)
 - iv. In addition to traditional degrees, many employers seek evidence of real-life problem-solving, experiential learning, and microcredentials.
 - v. Upskilling, or lifelong learning when it occurs on the job, can equip one with valuable transferable skills in the job market.
- j. Trends and Challenges in the Information-Age Workplace
 - i. Disruptive Technologies—AI
 - (1) Businesses are embracing AI and using it to create human-sounding output, as well as automating routine tasks.
 - (2) Experts estimate that automation will create more jobs (97 million) than it will displace (85 million); AI is expected to generate more wealth than the Internet did.
 - (3) Smartphone apps, programs or software designed for mobile devices, have contributed to the development of the sharing economy, an economic model in which individuals rent or borrow assets owned by others (think Uber or Lyft). (Figure 1.3 illustrates many technologies students will encounter in today's workplace.)
 - ii. The Changing Nature of Work
 - (1) Post-pandemic, approximately 30 percent of the entire U.S. workforce is employed under a hybrid work schedule; among remote-capable positions, over half of employees engage in hybrid work.
 - (2) A growing sector of the labor market relies on independent contractors hired on a project basis or short-term independent work, leading to the development of the gig economy.
 - iii. Anytime, Anywhere: 24/7/365 Availability
 - (1) Constant connectedness has also blurred the line between work and leisure.

- (2) Employees in the United States work long hours without extra compensation and receive the shortest paid vacations compared to their international counterparts.
- iv. Collaboration and Teams
 - (1) Many companies have created cross-functional teams to empower employees and boost their involvement in decision making.
 - (2) Traditional standing teams whose members don't change learn to work well together over time; they are best suited for tackling routine processes.
 - (3) Ad hoc teams are project-based teams that disband once they have accomplished their objectives.
- v. Flattened Management Layers
 - (1) Flatter organizations mean fewer managers, which allows organizations to better compete and to reduce expenses.
 - (2) Frontline employees are making decisions and communicating them to customers, employees, and executives.
- vi. Global Competition and Cultural Diversity
 - (1) Expanding global markets and growing workforce diversity means that you may be interacting with people from many cultures.
 - (2) Successful business communicators learn about other cultures and develop intercultural skills, including sensitivity, flexibility, patience, and tolerance.
- vii. Renewed Emphasis on Ethics
 - (1) Tales of misconduct have eroded public trust and fed into the perception that all business is dishonest.
 - (2) In a hyperconnected, always-on professional environment, communication skills are constantly noticed.
 - (3) Students will need to nurture their reputation and safeguard their brand online and off.

(The textbook provides the following examples of ethical misconduct: Disgraced Theranos founder Elizabeth Holmes; Pharma entrepreneur Martin Shkreli; lawsuits for harassment and discrimination against executives of companies like McDonald's, Google, Amazon, Pinterest, and Johnson & Johnson.)

- k. Knowledge Check 1: 15 minutes total. Review Twenty-First-Century Communication Skills.

- i. Using the Knowledge Check 1 Activity provided (PPT Slide 17), review key terms and concepts related to soft skills and interpersonal communication.
 - ii. Answers:
 - 1. Soft skills, people skills, or emotional intelligence are powerful social skills employers expect.
 - 2. Interpersonal skills or professional skills can be defined as a combination of communication, logical reasoning, critical-thinking, teamwork, and management skills.
 - 3. A sharing economy is an economic model in which individuals rent or borrow assets owned by others.
 - 4. Our future gig economy may rely on free agents who will be hired on a project basis rather than traditional full-time jobs.
- II. Practice Active Listening (1-2, PPT Slides 18-26)
- a. Numerous studies suggest that good listeners make good managers.
 - b. Active, empathic listening— when we sincerely strive to understand others' viewpoints—is the most effective form of listening, researchers tell us.
 - c. When we are mindful, or fully present, we build trust and gain respect.
 - d. Listening skills are important for career success, organizational effectiveness, and worker satisfaction.
 - e. Identifying Barriers to Effective Listening
 - i. Experts say that most people recall only between 25 and 50 percent of what they hear, which means your boss, coworkers, and customers retain only half or less of the conversation.
 - ii. Physical barriers
 - (1) Physical impediments to listening include hearing disabilities, poor acoustics, and noisy surroundings.
 - (2) It is also difficult to listen if you are ill, tired, or uncomfortable.
 - iii. Psychological barriers
 - (1) If other ideas run counter to our cultural, ethical, and personal values, we tend to tune out speakers and thus fail to receive their messages.
 - iv. Language problems
 - (1) Unfamiliar words can destroy the communication process because they lack meaning for the receiver.
 - (2) When emotion-laden, or charged, words cause an intense emotional impact, a listener may be unable to focus on the words that follow.
 - v. Nonverbal distractions

- (1) Unusual clothing or speech mannerisms, body twitches, or a radical hairstyle can prevent us from hearing what the speaker has to say.
- vi. Thought speed
 - (1) Listeners can process between 400 and 800 words per minute.
 - (2) Because speakers talk about 125 to 175 words per minute, we can become bored and allow our minds to wander.
 - (3) The lag time, or difference between our rate of speaking and our rate of listening/thinking is called the speech-thought differential.
- vii. Faking attention
 - (1) Faked attention seriously threatens effective listening because it encourages the mind to engage in flights of unchecked fancy. Those who fake attention often find it hard to concentrate even when they want to.
- viii. Grandstanding
 - (1) Because our own experiences and thoughts are most important to us, we may fail to listen carefully when we are just waiting politely for the next pause so that we can have our turn to speak.
- f. Building Powerful Listening Skills
 - i. Stop talking.
 - ii. Control the listening environment.
 - iii. Listen between the lines and validate emotion.
 - iv. Distinguish between facts and opinion.
 - v. Ask clarifying questions.
 - (1) Use open-ended questions (those without set answers) to draw out feelings, motivations, ideas, and suggestions.
 - (2) Use close-ended questions (those that require a choice among set answers) to identify key factors in a discussion.
 - vi. Paraphrase to increase understanding.
 - vii. Capitalize on lag time.
 - viii. Take selective notes.
 - ix. Adopt an empathic, humble attitude.
(Figure 1.4 provides a list of qualities associated with trained and untrained listeners.)
- g. Group Activity: 60 minutes total. Practicing Active Listening.
 - i. Using the Group Activity provided (PPT Slide 25), have students get into pairs and practice actively listening to each other.
 - (1) One person will tell the other a story—it doesn't have to be especially personal or complex—while the other actively listens.

- (2) After the storyteller completes the tale, the listener will attempt to retell the story in as much detail as possible.
 - (3) Give each student a chance to play the role of storyteller and listener.
 - ii. Group Activity Debrief
 - (1) What did you learn about yourself from this activity?
 - (2) Which of the powerful listening skills did you employ?
 - (3) Which listening barriers did you fall prey to?
 - iii. Answers:
 - (1) Answers will vary.
- III. Communicating Nonverbally (1-3, PPT Slides 27-35)
 - a. Nonverbal cues include eye contact, facial expression, body movements, time, space, territory, and appearance and affects how a receiver interprets, or decodes, a message.
 - i. Defining Nonverbal Communication
 - (1) Nonverbal communication includes all unwritten and unspoken messages, whether intended or not.
 - ii. Reconciling Words and Nonverbal Cues
 - (1) Researchers have long held that humans resolve clashes between verbal and nonverbal messaging by trusting the nonverbal component more than the words spoken.
 - (2) Cues broadcast by body language can help receivers understand the feelings and attitudes of senders.
 - (3) Be careful before attaching specific meanings to gestures or actions because behavior and its interpretations strongly depend on context and on one's cultural background.
 - b. Our Bodies Send Silent Messages
 - i. Eye contact
 - (1) In North American culture, sustained eye contact suggests trust and admiration; brief eye contact signals fear or stress.
 - (2) Prolonged eye contact or staring, though, can be intrusive and intimidating.
 - (3) Good eye contact enables the message sender to see whether a receiver is paying attention, showing respect, responding favorably, or feeling distress.
 - (4) Good eye contact, in North American culture, reveals the speaker's sincerity, confidence, and truthfulness.
 - ii. Facial expression
 - (1) The human face can display over 250,000 expressions.
 - (2) To hide their feelings, some people can control these expressions and maintain so-called poker faces.

- (3) In North America most of us display our emotions openly and often unintentionally.
 - (4) Raising or lowering the eyebrows, squinting the eyes, swallowing nervously, clenching the jaw, and smiling broadly can enhance or entirely replace verbal messages.
 - iii. Posture and gestures
 - (1) Leaning toward a speaker suggests attentiveness and interest; pulling away or shrinking back denotes fear, distrust, anxiety, or disgust.
 - (2) The meanings of some movements differ in other cultures.
 - (3) When speaking, make sure your upper body is aligned with the person to whom you are talking.
 - (4) Erect posture can send a message of confidence, competence, diligence, and strength.
 - (5) Avoid tilting your head to the side when listening or making an important point.
- c. Time, Space, and Territory Send Silent Messages
 - i. Time
 - (1) How we structure and use time tells observers about our personality and attitudes.
 - ii. Space
 - (1) How we organize the space around us reveals something about us and our objectives.
 - iii. Territory
 - (1) Each of us has a certain area that we feel is our own territory, whether it is a specific spot or just the space around us. We all maintain zones of privacy in which we feel comfortable.
(Figure 1.5 categorizes the four zones of social interaction among Americans, as formulated by anthropologist Edward T. Hall.)
- d. Appearance Sends Silent Messages
 - i. Eye Appeal of Business Documents
 - (1) Sloppy e-mails send a nonverbal message that the writer is in a terrific hurry or does not care about the receiver.
 - (2) Envelopes—through their postage, paper quality, and printing—can suggest that the messages they carry are routine, important, or junk mail.
 - ii. Personal Appearance
 - (1) The way you look—your clothing, grooming, and posture—transmits an instant nonverbal message about your status, credibility, personality, and potential.
- e. Developing Nonverbal Skills

- i. Establish and maintain eye contact.
 - ii. Use posture to show interest.
 - iii. Reduce or eliminate physical barriers.
 - iv. Improve your decoding skills.
 - v. Probe for more information.
 - vi. Interpret nonverbal meanings in context.
 - vii. Associate with people from different cultures.
 - viii. Appreciate the power of appearance.
 - ix. Observe yourself on video.
 - x. Enlist friends and family.
- f. Class Discussion Activity: 60 minutes total. Mastering Nonverbal Communication.
 - i. Using the Discussion Question Activity provided (PPT Slides 34-35), lead the class in a discussion about nonverbal communication.
 - (1) What are nonverbal cues?
 - (2) What are some nonverbal cues you should employ to become a more effective communicator?
 - (3) What are some nonverbal cues you should avoid?
 - ii. Answers:
 - (1) Nonverbal cues can include eye contact, facial expression, body movements, time, space, territory, and appearance, and affect how a receiver interprets, or decodes, a message.
 - (2) To become an effective communicator:
 - (a) Establish and maintain eye contact.
 - (b) Use posture to show interest.
 - (c) Reduce or eliminate physical barriers.
 - (d) Improve your decoding skills.
 - (e) Probe for more information.
 - iii. Use the following questions to debrief students on the class discussion:
 - (1) Why are nonverbal cues important? How do they affect the way we communicate with and understand each other?
 - (2) How might cultural diversity affect nonverbal communication?
 - iv. Answers:
 - (1) Researchers have long held that humans resolve clashes between verbal and nonverbal messaging by trusting the nonverbal component more than the words spoken.
 - (2) Behavior and its interpretations strongly depend on context and on one's cultural background.
- IV. Understanding Culture and Communication (1-4, PPT Slides 36-45)

- a. When different cultures come together, significant misunderstandings can occur; therefore, special sensitivity and skills are necessary.
- b. Culture may be defined as the complex system of values, traits, morals, and customs shared by a society.
- c. Globalization, growing diversity, and social networking demand that we adjust and adopt new attitudes.
- d. There are five key dimensions of culture: context, individualism, time orientation, power distance, and communication style.
- e. High and Low Context
 - i. Context refers to the stimuli, environment, or ambience surrounding an event.
 - ii. Low-context cultures (such as those in North America, Scandinavia, and Germany) depend little on the context and assume messages should be explicit.
 - iii. High-context cultures (such as those in China, Japan, and Middle Eastern countries) assume that the listener does not need much background information.
(In Figure 1.6, low-context and high-context cultures are arranged on a continuum.)
- f. Low-context cultures
 - i. Tend to prefer direct verbal interaction
 - ii. Tend to understand meaning at only one sociocultural level
 - iii. Are generally less proficient in reading nonverbal cues
 - iv. Value individualism
 - v. Rely more on logic
 - vi. Say no directly
 - vii. Communicate in highly structured, detailed messages with literal meanings
 - viii. Give authority to written information
- g. High-context cultures
 - i. Tend to prefer indirect verbal interaction
 - ii. Tend to understand meanings embedded at many sociocultural levels
 - iii. Are generally more proficient in reading nonverbal cues
 - iv. Value group membership
 - v. Rely more on context and feeling
 - vi. Talk around point, avoid saying no
 - vii. Communicate in sometimes simple, sometimes ambiguous messages
 - viii. Understand visual messages readily
- h. Individualism and Collectivism
 - i. Individualism refers to an attitude of independence and freedom from control.

- ii. Members of low-context cultures, particularly North Americans, tend to value individualism.
- iii. Collectivism emphasizes membership in organizations, groups, and teams; it encourages acceptance of group values, duties, and decisions.
- iv. Members of high-context cultures are more collectivist.
- v. Newer research suggests cultural convergence, a lessening of group differences, and a trend toward greater global similarity, particularly in higher individualism and lower power distance. (Figure 1.7 shows selected countries ranked according to their expression of collectivism and individualism as well as power distance.)
- i. Time Orientation
 - i. Monochronic time or M-Time is time perceived as if it were running on a single, linear track.
 - ii. Western cultures tend to be monochronic and view time as a precious commodity associated with productivity, efficiency, and money.
 - iii. Polychronic time or P-Time is viewed as abundant and nonlinear.
 - iv. Most Asian, South American, and Native American cultures are polychronic and view time as an unlimited resource to be enjoyed; it is open and flexible.
- j. Power Distance
 - i. Power distance measures how people in different societies cope with inequality—in other words, how they relate to more powerful individuals.
 - ii. High-power-distance countries maintain formal hierarchies and embrace relatively authoritarian, paternalistic power relationships.
 - iii. Low-power-distance cultures promote feelings of equality, encourage subordinates to voice opinions and participate in decision making, and tend to be more democratic, egalitarian, and informal.
 - iv. While many Asian countries have high-power distance cultures, most Western cultures have low-power distance.
- k. Communication Style
 - i. People in low-context cultures rely heavily on words in contracts and negotiations.
 - ii. People in high-context cultures place more emphasis on the surrounding context than on the words describing a negotiation.
 - iii. North Americans are uncomfortable with silence, impatient with delays, value straightforwardness, are suspicious of evasiveness,

- and distrust people whom they perceive as having a hidden agenda or playing their cards too close to the chest.
- l. Knowledge Check 2: 15 minutes total. Understanding low-context and high-context cultures. Using the Knowledge Check 2 Activity provided (PPT Slide 45), review the characteristics of low-context and high-context cultures.
 - i. All of the following are qualities of a low-context culture EXCEPT:
 - A. Tend to prefer direct verbal interaction
 - B. Avoid saying no
 - C. Value individualism
 - D. Rely more on logic
 - ii. Answer: B. Avoid saying no
 - iii. All of the following are qualities of a high-context culture EXCEPT:
 - A. Are generally more proficient in reading nonverbal cues
 - B. Rely more on context and feeling
 - C. Understand visual messages readily
 - D. Give authority to written information
 - iv. Answer: D. Give authority to written information
 - V. Becoming Interculturally Proficient (1-5, PPT Slides 46-53)
 - a. Avoiding Ethnocentrism and Stereotyping
 - i. Ethnocentrism is the belief in the superiority of one's own ethnic group.
 - ii. A stereotype is an oversimplified, rigid perception of a behavioral pattern or characteristic applied uncritically to groups.
 - (1) When a stereotype develops into a rigid attitude and when it is based on erroneous beliefs or preconceptions, then it is hurtful, even toxic, and should be called a prejudice.
 - iii. Tolerance, learning about those who are not like us and being open-minded and receptive to new experiences, is crucial as global markets expand and our society becomes increasingly multiethnic.
 - iv. To become tolerant, practice empathy; try to see the world through another's eyes and be less judgmental and more eager to seek common ground.
 - v. One way of promoting greater understanding is to work toward a common goal.
 - b. Refining Oral Communication With Intercultural Audiences
 - i. Use simple English.
 - ii. Speak slowly and enunciate clearly.
 - iii. Encourage accurate feedback.

- iv. Check frequently for comprehension.
 - v. Observe eye messages.
 - vi. Accept blame.
 - vii. Listen without interrupting.
 - viii. Smile when appropriate.
 - ix. Follow up in writing.
- c. Perfecting Written Communication With Intercultural Audiences
 - i. When you write to someone from a different culture, you can improve your chances of being understood by following the following suggestions:
 - (1) Consider local styles and conventions.
 - (2) Observe titles and rank.
 - (3) Hire a translator.
 - (4) Use short sentences and short paragraphs.
 - (5) Avoid ambiguity.
 - (6) Cite numbers carefully.
- d. Growing Workforce Representation
 - i. The domestic workforce is becoming more diverse.
 - ii. Underrepresented groups—including Black American, Hispanic American, Latin American, Asian American, and Native American communities—comprise 40 percent of the U.S. population.
 - iii. By 2045, experts predict that communities of color will represent just over half the U.S. population.
 - iv. Women comprise nearly 47 percent of the workforce.
 - v. The share of the population over 65 will jump from 15 percent now to almost 22 percent in 2050. Many of these older people will remain in the workforce.
 - vi. Thanks to technological advances, more individuals with disabilities are joining the workforce.
- e. Embracing Varied Perspectives and Experiences at Work
 - i. As society and the workforce become more diverse, successful communication among the various identity groups brings distinct advantages in three areas.
 - (1) Consumers. A diverse staff is better able to respond to the increasingly diverse customer base in local and world markets.
 - (2) Work Teams. Diversity enhances creativity because inclusive teams bring novel perspectives to the table, resulting in better decision making and problem solving.
 - (3) Businesses. Organizations gradually realize that inclusivity is a critical bottom-line strategy to increase revenue, engage employees, and spur innovation.
- f. Communicating in a Multicultural Workplace

- i. The following suggestions can help you find ways to improve communication and interaction:
 - (1) Seek training.
 - (2) Understand the value of difference.
 - (a) Sameness fosters an absence of critical thinking called groupthink.
 - (3) Learn about your cultural self.
 - (4) Make fewer assumptions.
 - (5) Build on similarities.
- g. Self-Assessment Activity: 30 minutes total. Mastering Intercultural Effectiveness.
 - i. Using the Self-Assessment Activity Provided (PPT Slide 53), ask students to answer the following questions, independently and later, in class discussion:
 - (1) How is diversity affecting the workforce?
 - (2) How can you ensure success in your oral communication with intercultural audiences?
 - (3) How can you ensure success in your written communication with intercultural audiences?
 - (4) What are some things you can do to improve your interactions with others in a culturally diverse work environment?
 - ii. Answers:
 - (1) Underrepresented groups—including Black American, Hispanic American, Latin American, Asian American, and Native American communities—now make up almost 40 percent of the U.S. population. Projections indicate that 2045 will mark the point at which these groups will together represent just over half the population. This demographic shift has already occurred among youth under 18 and is expected by 2027 for adults between 18 and 29. Women comprise nearly 47 percent of the workforce. Moreover, the share of the population over 65 will jump from 15 percent now to almost 22 percent in 2050. Many of these older people will remain in the workforce. Thanks to technological advances, more people with disabilities are also joining the workforce.
 - (2) To ensure success in your oral communication with intercultural audiences:
 - (a) Use simple English.
 - (b) Speak slowly and enunciate clearly.
 - (c) Encourage accurate feedback.

- (d) Check frequently for comprehension
- (e) Observe eye messages.
- (f) Accept blame.
- (g) Listen without interrupting.
- (h) Smile when appropriate.
- (i) Follow up in writing.
- (3) To ensure success in your written communication with intercultural audiences;
 - (a) Consider local styles and conventions.
 - (b) Observe titles and rank.
 - (c) Hire a translator.
 - (d) Use short sentences and short paragraphs.
 - (e) Avoid ambiguity.
 - (f) Cite numbers carefully.
- (4) To improve your interactions with others in a culturally diverse work environment:
 - (a) Seek Training.
 - (b) Understand the value of difference.
 - (c) Learn about your cultural self.
 - (d) Make fewer assumptions.
 - (e) Build on similarities.

ADDITIONAL DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

You can assign these questions several ways: in a discussion forum in your LMS; as whole-class discussions in person; or as a partner or group activity in class.

1. Discussion: Succeeding in a Dynamic Work Environment with Communication Skills (Critical Thinking #11, 1.1, PPT Slide 14) Duration 10 minutes.
 - a. Discuss the downsides of the always-on workplace and increasing collaboration.
 - i. Answer: The always-on workplace can blur the boundary between work and personal life, leading to stress, burnout, and reduced overall well-being.
 - ii. Constant connectivity also creates pressure to respond immediately, which can decrease productivity and focus.
 - iii. Increased collaboration, while beneficial, can result in excessive meetings, interruptions, and reliance on others, slowing decision-making and reducing individual efficiency.

- B. Discussion: Practice Active Listening (Critical Thinking #12, 1.2, PPT Slide 19)
Duration 5 minutes.
- a. According to experts, we ignore, forget, distort, or misunderstand 75 percent of everything we hear. Why are we such poor listeners?
 - i. Answer: We are poor listeners because of numerous barriers, including distractions in our environment, personal biases, and emotional reactions to words or topics. Our brains process information faster than people speak, causing our minds to wander.
 - ii. Additionally, many people focus on preparing their own responses instead of truly listening, or they pretend to listen without fully engaging, leading to misunderstanding and poor retention.
- C. Discussion: Communicating Nonverbally (Critical Thinking #13, 1.3, PPT Slide 28)
Duration 10 minutes.
- a. What arguments could you give for the idea that body language is a science with principles that can be interpreted accurately by specialists?
 - i. Answer: Researchers have long held that humans resolve clashes between verbal and nonverbal messaging by trusting the nonverbal component more than the words spoken.
 - b. What arguments could you give against the idea that body language is a science with principles that can be interpreted accurately by specialists?
 - i. Answer: Behavior and its interpretations strongly depend on context and on one's cultural background.
- D. Discussion: Understanding Culture and Communication (Critical Thinking #14. 1.4, 1.5, PPT Slides 37, 47) Duration 10 minutes.
- a. Canadians are polite, the French are rude, Italians are passionate, Australians are laid back, Germans are humorless, Chinese people are studious, the Japanese are punctual and polite—these are just a few stereotypes of many. As we discussed, a stereotype is an oversimplified perception of a behavioral pattern or characteristic applied to entire groups. In what way are such stereotypes harmless or harmful?
 - i. Answer: Stereotypes can be somewhat harmless when they serve as general starting points for understanding cultural differences. However, they are often harmful because they oversimplify complex individuals, promote inaccurate assumptions, and can lead to bias, prejudice, or discrimination. Relying on stereotypes in communication can damage relationships, reduce trust, and prevent meaningful intercultural understanding.
- E. Discussion: Becoming Interculturally Proficient (Critical Thinking #15. 1.5, PPT Slides 47, 52) Duration 15 minutes.

- a. If a coworker kept spouting the worst ethnic and racial stereotypes, how would you respond? Would you remain silent and change the subject, or would you speak up?
 - i. Answer: Answers may vary. Lead the class in a discussion of the pros and cons of speaking up and remaining silent.
- b. What other options would you have in dealing with such a coworker?
 - i. Answer: You could model practicing tolerance and rejecting stereotypes and ethnocentrism in the workforce. If the offender is not your boss, you suggest the need for sensitivity training.
- c. Consider whether your answer would change if the offender were your boss.
 - i. Answer: Answers may vary, but you could consider contacting your organization's human resources department and filing a complaint.

ADDITIONAL ACTIVITIES AND ASSIGNMENTS

1. Activities and Cases:

- a. Putting AI to the Test: A Universally Applicable Activity (Activities and Cases #1, 1-1 to 1-5)
 - i. As you work through the chapters of this textbook, you're building your own voice and style as a communicator. You're also learning to analyze messages for clarity, conciseness, and appropriateness—skills that every business professional needs. Here is your opportunity to let gen AI legitimately assist you with a writing assignment under the guidance your instructor provides. Tools such as ChatGPT, Claude, and Gemini are becoming part of how businesspeople create and refine messages on the job. Becoming a proficient writer will make you a more sophisticated AI user.
 - ii. This activity allows you to examine how AI tools can provide clear, engaging responses or sometimes fall short. One frequent criticism has focused on tone, meaning how AI-generated prose sounds. Critics have called it “bland” or “robotic.” You'll have a chance to find out how well AI chatbots understand the point of a case scenario or assignment prompt. You'll be able to decide whether their writing measures up to your standards. Think of it as a real-world test of what AI can (and can't) do for business communicators. Studying Chapters 2, 3, and 4 in particular will help you become a better judge of gen AI output. Your AI proficiency will grow with your writing skills.
 - iii. Student Directions: Choose any end-of-chapter activity, case scenario, or writing prompt from this textbook. Run it through at least one generative AI tool—such as ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini, or Copilot. Analyze the output using criteria such as the following:
 - Does the AI-generated output address the assignment fully and effectively?
 - How concise and clear is the writing? Are any portions of the text redundant? Do they sound bland?
 - When you're asked to use more than one AI tool, compare their outputs. Which one addresses the case scenario more fully and is written more clearly? Is one more concise than the other?
 - Consider how the AI response might differ from your own work. What insight into your own writing does it offer?

- iv. You may ask students to share their findings in a class discussion (or discussion board), a brief memo, or a social media post.
- b. Interpersonal Skills: Critical Thinking About AI Tool Use (Activities and Cases #2, 1-1)
 - i. As generative artificial intelligence (AI) enters workplaces, executives are taking advantage of AI writing tools such as ChatGPT, Gemini, or Claude. From e-mails on sensitive topics to bullet points for slide decks, bosses are turning to AI to craft their messages. But is it ethical to use AI without disclosing the source, or to rely on chatbot output without knowing and checking its origin? Is this good business?
 - ii. This issue arises because most executives consider excellent communication skills as part of their job, so they are reluctant to admit borrowing from AI. In fact, the practice has caused trouble for some leaders. For instance, an associate dean at Vanderbilt used AI to draft a response to a serious public safety event at another campus. When the truth emerged, the administrator was placed on leave.
 - iii. Still, some believe that using AI to improve efficiency is fair. One executive drafted one overly long e-mail and then used ChatGPT to cut redundancies. Others, unsure of their own writing skills, turn to AI for help. Carefully proofreading AI results, even if they are a bit formulaic, can reassure executives who are insecure about their messages.
 - iv. Executives whose first language is not English also benefit. A CEO based overseas says he uses AI writing tools but adds his own voice to ensure his messages sound authentic.
 - v. Still, most executives wouldn't want employees to suspect their messages are bot-generated. After all, that could suggest the bosses are not thinking for themselves—or worse, that they are simply lazy.
 - vi. A KPMG survey found that almost two-thirds of executives aren't sure how best to use AI, but they believe it will play a key role in their businesses within three to five years. This uncertainty highlights why AI use can spark both excitement and skepticism in the workplace.
 - vii. Student Directions: Write a thoughtful e-mail or memo to your instructor discussing the following questions:
 - 1. Would it bother you if your boss (whether your current instructor or your future manager) used AI tools without acknowledging them?

2. What arguments can you make for and against executives' using AI to write a message or speech without giving credit to the source?
 3. What impact might AI have on your intended profession?
 4. When does use of AI writing tools cross the line from occasional help to overreliance?
- c. First Things First: Introductions (Activities and Cases #3, 1-1)
 - i. Your instructor wants to know more about you, your motivation for taking this course, your career goals, and your writing skills.
 - ii. Student Directions: Send an e-mail or write a memo of introduction to your instructor. See Chapter 5 for formats and tips on preparing e-mails. In your message, include the following:
 1. Your reasons for taking this class
 2. Your career plans and goals (both temporary and long term)
 3. A brief description of your employment, if any, and your favorite activities
 4. An evaluation and discussion of your current communication skills, including your strengths and areas that need improvement
 - iii. Alternatively, you may ask students to create a profile within a learning-management system (e.g., Blackboard, Canvas, Moodle, or Brightspace) to introduce themselves to their classmates as well. You may challenge them to compose their introduction in 140–280 or fewer characters (see Chapter 5 for tips on writing tweets and other microblogging messages). As an option, you may ask students to create a brief business-like video introduction.
- d. Active Listening: Introducing Teammates (Activities and Cases #4, 1-1, 1-2)
 - i. Teamwork is the lifeblood of many business organizations today. To help you develop coveted speaking, listening, and teamwork skills, your instructor may assign team projects. One of the first jobs in any team is selecting members and becoming acquainted.
 - ii. Student Directions: Your instructor will divide your class into small groups or teams. At your instructor's direction, either (a) interview another group member and introduce that person to the group or (b) introduce yourself to the group. Think of this as an informal interview for a team assignment or a job. You may want to prepare notes from which to speak. Your introduction should include information such as the following:
 - Where did you grow up?
 - What work and extracurricular activities have you engaged in?

- What are your interests and talents? What are you good at doing?
 - What have you achieved?
 - How involved and familiar are you with communication technology and social media?
 - What are your professional and personal goals? Where do you expect to be five years from now?
 - Name one thing about you that others might not guess when they first meet you.
- iii. To develop listening skills, team members should practice the listening techniques discussed in this chapter and take brief notes when other students are presenting. Teams should be prepared to discuss three important facts as well as remember details about each speaker.
- iv. In virtual classes, you may form groups in the forum or discussion board of your course management system. You may assign other means by which students can introduce one or more teammates.
- e. Interpersonal Skills: Taking Stock of Your Assets (Activities and Cases #5, 1-1)
- i. When hiring future workers, employers look for technical skills, which are those we learn, such as mastery of software applications or accountancy procedures. However, as we have seen in this chapter, businesses are desperate for job candidates equipped with interpersonal skills; some recruiters value interpersonal skills even more than technical skills. Recall that these interpersonal skills include strengths such as communication, social skills, and other psychological assets a person possesses. Studies have divided interpersonal skills into four categories:
 - Thinking and problem solving
 - Oral and written communication
 - Personal qualities and work ethic
 - Social skills and teamwork
 - ii. Student Directions: Using the four categories to guide you, identify your own interpersonal skills, paying attention to those attributes you think a potential employer would value. Prepare lists of at least four items in each of the four categories. For example, as evidence of problem solving, you might list a specific workplace or student problem you recognized and solved. You will want to weave these words and phrases into cover letters and résumés, which are covered in Chapter 13.

- f. Listening Survey: Measure Your Listening Skills (Activities and Cases #6, 1-2)
- i. “When people talk, listen completely. Don’t be thinking what you’re going to say. Most people never listen. Nor do they observe,” is a view the writer Ernest Hemingway articulated in his novel Across the River and into the Trees. Psychologists say that listening is an act of connection. Even if we can’t touch or see others, we feel connected hearing their voices. In relationships, listening is an act of love, we are told.
 - ii. In business, assertiveness and strong opinions tend to rule and drown out other voices. Leaders wishing to exude decisiveness speak more than they listen and are not even aware of their domineering behavior. Yet researchers note that active, empathic listening is key to being successful in teams and in leadership roles. They advise businesspeople to examine their bad habits, validate opinions of others, verify what is being said, watch for speakers’ nonverbal cues, and control their own reactions and body language.
 - iii. Ask students: How do you measure up? Do you know how good your listening skills are?
 - iv. Student Directions 1: Score yourself on the following question as 1 (the statement is not true for me at all), 2 (I mildly disagree), 3 (I partly agree and partly disagree with the statement), 4 (I mildly agree), or 5 (the statement is totally true for me).
 - I prefer talking to listening to what others may say.
 - It mostly doesn’t occur to me to ask questions.
 - When others are talking, I’m often thinking about what I’ll say next.
 - The main point of talking is to impress people, or at least to entertain them.
 - My perspective is usually right, so if others disagree, I convince them to see it my way.
 - It bothers me when people get their facts wrong.
 - It’s important to point out when people are wrong about something.
 - Most people are boring, so I usually do most of the talking.
 - When my body tries to talk to me with pain or other discomforts, I tune my body out.
 - v. Student Directions 2. Record your score. Your instructor will share the interpretation of the results with you. Did you score high or low? Try the following experiment at home with your loved ones: Select an object, a “listening stick” or a “listening stone,” that will indicate turn-taking. Only the person in possession of the listening object will be allowed to speak. Not until the speaker is ready to give up the stick or stone can another person talk. Is it difficult for you to remain silent until you get your hands on the listening object? Are you truly present during the conversation? Do you listen without waiting impatiently to speak? Share your observations in class. The instructor may ask you to submit your findings and/or report in writing. What could you do to further improve your listening skills?

- g. Becoming a Better Listener With TED (Activities and Cases #7, 1-2)
 - i. Reading this chapter, did you wonder how much you are able retain from a conversation—50 percent? Twenty-five percent without notes?
 - ii. TED Talks are opportunities to learn from the best minds in tech, entertainment, and design. With this assignment, you can practice listening and retention. Oscar Trimboli is a well-known authority on deep listening, focusing on how to truly hear what others are saying beyond words.
 - iii. Student Directions: Choose one of Oscar Trimboli’s talks on his favorite subject of “Deep Listening: Impact Beyond Words” on YouTube. Find a quiet space free from distractions. Turn off your notifications to avoid interruptions. Watch Oscar Trimboli’s entire talk attentively without taking notes. After it ends, jot down what you recall from the presentation—preferably taking notes by hand. Alone or with teammates, review your notes.
 - iv. Watch the TED talk again to establish what important points you may have left out. In class or on your learning-management platform, chat about your observations. Estimate how much you remembered from the talk. Discuss your insights from Oscar Trimboli’s presentation. Share his recommendations, and comment on your ability to recall his main points. You may be asked to summarize your findings in a memo or a social media post. Other experts could be assigned for this activity.
- h. Professional Presence: Evaluating Nonverbal Cues (Activities and Cases #8, 1-2)
 - i. Your classroom is more than just a place to learn—it’s also a chance to practice projecting a professional image. Next time you’re in your business communication class (or any other business course), take a few minutes to observe the nonverbal cues of your classmates and yourself.
 - ii. Student Directions:

- Watch your classmates: Are they sitting up straight and showing interest? Are they slouching, fidgeting, or seem distracted?
 - Reflect on your own behavior: How are you sitting? Are you engaged and attentive, or do your nonverbal signals suggest boredom or lack of interest?
 - Consider this: Instructors notice these behaviors, just as managers do in the workplace. What impressions might you be creating?
 - Write a short reflection (one or two paragraphs) about what you observed and how it connects to the expectations you'll face in a professional setting.
- iii. Consider leading students in class discussion. Ask: Is it fair to say that classroom conduct is naturally different from workplace behavior? Or should the classroom be seen as a professional environment where good habits start?
- i. Nonverbal Communication: Ambiguous by Definition (Activities and Cases #9, 1-3)
- i. Can body language be accurately interpreted? Take eye contact. Many people think that avoiding eye contact means a person is lying, but nonverbal language expert Steven Keyl explains that, depending on context, eye contact can be ambiguous. For example, shy or nervous people may avert their eyes.
 - ii. In some cultures, locking eyes with an authority figure is viewed as disrespectful. Paradoxically, brazen liars tend to engage in more eye contact than normal to appear truthful. Too much eye contact, therefore, might raise suspicions. Prolonged eye contact, i.e., staring, can seem threatening, or it can indicate romantic interest.
 - iii. Sitting casually so that the soles of the shoes are showing, while harmless in the United States or Western Europe, amounts to a major insult in Arab and some other Middle Eastern or Asian cultures.
 - iv. Student Directions. What attitudes do the following nonverbal signals suggest to you? Do these nonverbal signals always mean the same thing? What part does context play in your interpretations?
 - v. Write up your analysis in a format your instructor requests. Come up with 2–3 additional nonverbal cues and contexts that show their ambiguity.
 - a. Covering the mouth while speaking
 - b. Touching the nose
 - c. Pointing with one finger

- d. Tapping the foot
 - e. Tilting the head to the side
 - f. Wringing hands, tugging ears
 - g. Twitching, sweating
 - h. Fidgeting, darting eyes
- j. Nonverbal Communication: What to Wear at Work (Activities and Cases #10, 1-3)
 - i. Although many employers allow casual attire, not all employers and customers are happy with the results. To learn more about the implementation, acceptance, and effects of casual-dress programs, select one of the following activities, all of which involve some form of interviewing.
 - ii. Student Directions:
 - a. In teams, gather information from human resources directors to determine which local companies allow casual or dress-down days, how often, and under what conditions. The information may be collected by personal or virtual interviews, e-mail, telephone, or instant messaging.
 - b. In teams, conduct inquiring-reporter interviews. Ask individuals in the community how they react to casual dress in the workplace. Develop a set of standard interview questions.
 - c. Compare and contrast the effects of business-dress standards on such factors as the projected image of the company, the nature of the interactions with customers and coworkers, the morale of employees, and the productivity of employees. What generalizations can you draw from your findings?
- k. Nonverbal Communication Around the World (Activities and Cases #11, 1-3, 1-4)
 - i. Whenever people communicate, gestures play an important role. Because culture shapes the meaning of gestures, miscommunication and misunderstanding can easily result in international situations.
 - ii. Student Directions. Use the Internet to research the meanings of selected gestures. Make a list of ten gestures (other than those discussed in the text) that have different meanings in different countries. Consider the fingertip kiss, nose thumb, eyelid pull, nose tap, head shake, and other gestures. How are the meanings different in other countries? Can you name neutral symbols that have changed meaning because they were appropriated by a certain political group (think the index-finger-thumb pinch—the - OK sign)? Which gestures that are innocent in the United States are considered vulgar and offensive in other countries?

- l. Intercultural Communication: Decoding Corporate Clichés (Activities and Cases #12, 1-4)
 - i. The language of business is rife with jargon and clichés—once-fashionable idiomatic expressions that become stale and lose meaning. They sound particularly murky to the uninitiated.
 - ii. Student Directions. Translate the annoying buzzwords into plain English. Assume that you are explaining them to English language learners.
 - a. synergy
 - b. touch base
 - c. pivot
 - d. take this offline
 - e. deep dive
 - f. bandwidth
 - g. on the same page
 - h. boil the ocean
 - i. leverage
 - j. blue-sky thinking
 - k. circle the wagons
 - m. Intercultural Communication: Examining Cultural Stereotypes (Activities and Cases #13, 1-4, 1-5)
 - i. Almost all of us at some point in our lives are subject to stereotyping by others, whether it's because of where we're from, how tall we are, what we do for a living, or being tourists within the United States and abroad. Negative stereotypes sting. However, even presumably positive stereotypes can offend or embarrass because they ignore our individuality and flatten our uniqueness.
 - ii. Student Directions. Think about a culture or country you know well—maybe your own, or one you have visited or studied. In one column, list three positive stereotypes you have heard about this culture. In another column, list three negative stereotypes. How do they feel to you? Which do you find amusing, and which are more hurtful?
 - iii. Now consider a culture you don't know very well. For example, you may not know much about Brazil, but you might picture samba, soccer, Carnival, and the Amazon rainforest. Or you may think of Thailand as temples, street food, tropical beaches, and the traditional Thai greeting called the “wai.” What else comes to mind? How might these simple images limit your understanding of real people and their experiences?

- iv. Jot down a few “positive” or “negative” stereotypes you might hold, even if you’re not sure how accurate they are. Think about how those stereotypes might affect how you perceive people from that culture—or how they might perceive you. Share your notes and thoughts with your team or the class, as your instructor directs. You can also explore how other cultures perceive you by checking out the BBC News Country Profiles or other global news sources. Your instructor may ask you to summarize your observations in writing.
- n. Intercultural Communication: Roman Holiday Madness (Activities and Cases #14, 1-4, 1-5)
 - i. Few intercultural encounters can be as contentious as rowdy tourists. After the COVID-19 pandemic, international visitors in Italy appeared to have abandoned all self-control. An American smashed two precious sculptures in the Vatican. A Saudi visitor drove a rented Maserati down the Spanish Steps in Rome. An Australian buzzed around Pompeii on a motorbike. Skinny-dipping Americans and other tourists went for an illicit swim in the Grand Canal in Venice. A Czech traveler sunbathed in the buff. Vandals defaced monuments and treated the fragile environment of the city as if it were the beach.
 - ii. Local authorities blame “overtourism,” the negative impact from too many visitors, for the seeming increase in unruly behavior and high housing prices. Venice is so packed during high season that the authorities have decided to regulate tourist flows to prevent as many as 88,000 visits a day. The picturesque city narrowly escaped being blacklisted by UNESCO as an endangered world heritage site by banning large cruise ships. The most popular European cities have responded with tourist taxes, bans of Airbnb, stiff fines, access limitations, and prohibitions of bar hopping. What could explain the poor behavior in Venice and other tourist destinations? Have you witnessed “ugly tourist” behavior here at home in the United States and abroad?
 - iii. Student Directions:
 - a. In small groups, discuss why you think these “ugly tourist” incidents keep happening in places such as Italy or Spain. How do social media fuel or amplify this behavior? Think about your own travel experience too—have you witnessed anything similar in the United States or abroad? Be ready to share a few key ideas with the class.
 - b. Write a short journal entry reflecting on this scenario. Have you ever noticed or maybe even participated in this kind of behavior while traveling? What do you think causes it—cultural misunderstandings, stereotypes, or just people letting loose? How do you think locals feel when they experience such behavior? Keep it honest. There is no right or wrong answer here.

- o. Learning from Epic Intercultural Fails (Activities and Cases #15, 1-4, 1-5)
 - i. As business organizations become increasingly global in their structure and marketing, they face communication problems resulting from cultural misunderstandings. They also must deal with culture clashes and radically different values around the world.
 - ii. Student Directions. Based on what you have learned in this chapter, describe several broad principles that could be applied in helping the brands involved understand what went wrong in the following events. What suggestions could you make for preventing such problems?
 - Fashion retailer Zara released a UK ad campaign featuring mannequins with missing limbs wrapped in white sheets amid rubble. Supposedly, the company was aiming for an artistic effect, wishing to evoke unfinished sculptures in an artist's studio, not reference world events. However, many viewers felt the imagery was in poor taste. They believed it resembled scenes from global conflicts, particularly the war in Gaza and found these perceived references insensitive. Prompted by the public outcry, Zara stated it regretted the "misunderstanding." In vain, the company attempted to clarify that the ad campaign had been created before the Gaza conflict erupted. However, Zara ultimately removed the controversial campaign from its website and social media accounts after calls for a boycott grew louder.
 - Shein, the world's largest online fashion retailer, caused great consternation for selling a necklace featuring a swastika pendant. The company explained the design was based on the Buddhist symbol of good fortune, but most consumers were put off by the symbol's association with the Nazis. Not surprisingly, the product listing sparked outrage on social media. Like other embattled brands, Shein at first attempted to explain its intentions, something that sounded to some as though the company were trying to excuse its poor choice, rather than apologize unequivocally. Ultimately, though, Shein responded by removing the product, calling the necklace and pendant "a mistake," and apologizing publicly.

- Apple released an ad campaign in Thailand as part of its “Apple at Work” series that did not land as planned. The campaign promoting several Apple products featured a comedy plot of a scrappy American team on their first overseas business trip in Thailand. Critics argued that the ad campaign portrayed Thailand in a stereotypical way as a mere backdrop for silly Western antics instead of accurately and authentically representing Thai culture. Apple received its share of social media criticism. Some viewers even stated that this depiction made the “brand feel old.”
 - Italian fashion house Dolce & Gabbana exhibited poor taste in releasing three commercials before its planned Shanghai show. The “Eating With Chopsticks” videos ran on Weibo, a Chinese social media network, and featured a model attempting to eat Italian food with chopsticks. Perhaps the Italians had thought the ads were funny, but the Chinese weren’t laughing. People called the ads racist, sexist, and plain disrespectful. Within 24 hours, the commercials disappeared, and Domenico Dolce and Stefano Gabbana posted a remorseful seeming apology video to Weibo. However, Stefano Gabbana’s angry Instagram exchange with another user became public. In it, the fashion designer berated the Chinese viewers and defended the videos. The fallout was such that the fashion show had to be cancelled as retailers, models, and celebrities backed out. Gabbana then claimed his account had been hacked. The fiasco cost Dolce & Gabbana a 20-percent drop in brand value.
- p. Intercultural Blunders Blow Up on Social Media (Activities and Cases #16, 1-4, 1-5)
- i. Once a gaffe goes viral on social media, it’s difficult to contain. Consider the worst, most embarrassing intercultural misstep, and then imagine it amplified a thousand-fold or millionfold on the Internet for everyone to dissect. What follows is a list of diversity and inclusion blunders and awkward social media slip-ups with intercultural implications.
 - ii. Student Directions. Consider the gravity of each offense; then, individually or in groups, discuss each for its takeaway, the lesson to be learned from it.
 - The Australian toothpaste brand White Glo recently experienced a severe backlash on social media. Its advertising campaign featured the slogan “Make the White Choice” on trams in Melbourne and buses in Sydney. Critics called the catchphrase racially insensitive because, as they put it, it promoted whiteness as superior. The campaign quickly went viral as social media users condemned the brand for its lack of cultural awareness. White Glo apologized, stating it meant no harm, and the company explained that the slogan was intended as a play on “Make the Right Choice” to highlight the brand’s effective whitening products. Despite the apology, many members of the public felt it failed to address an apparent “systemic blind spot,” in the words of an Australian communication strategist.

- Hong Kong carrier Cathay Pacific Airlines fired three flight attendants accused of mocking mainland Chinese people for their apparent lack of English language skills on a flight from Chengdu to Hong Kong. An audio clip surfaced that captured the cabin crew as they were making fun of passengers who had asked for a “carpet” instead of a “blanket.” The recording drew widespread condemnation on Chinese social media platforms. Cathay Pacific issued multiple apologies and suspended the crew members. Eventually, they were dismissed. The airline’s CEO, Ronald Lam, pledged to personally lead a taskforce to review the company’s processes and to overhaul staff training to prevent such incidents in the future.
- Amazon’s Swedish website launch astonished audiences. The machine-translated Swedish version of Amazon’s portal went live with embarrassing blunders. For example, the AI substituted the Argentinian flag for the Swedish flag (although they really don’t look much alike!) and featured embarrassingly inaccurate product descriptions. Let’s just say that the word rooster was replaced with the Swedish word for male genitalia.
- Coca-Cola failed miserably in New Zealand when it attempted to combine Māori, the indigenous language, and English. Vending machines full of Coca-Cola bottles greeted Māori consumers with “Kia ora, mate”—a banner that translated as “Hello, Death” in the indigenous language. “Mate” was supposed to suggest friendliness since it is a friendly form of address common in Australia and New Zealand, but in Māori, the word “mate” means death.

- Burger King's U.K. division had the best intentions, but its attempt to entice more women to become professional chefs misfired, although the fast-food chain was offering scholarships as incentives. The problem? On International Women's Day, the company posted on X, "Women belong in the kitchen." The slogan fell flat. Apparently, the public was not willing to consider the context in which the prototypical sexist phrase was used.
- q. Intercultural Communication: Aussie Humor Falls Flat in Bangkok (Activities and Cases #17, 1-4, 1-5)
- i. An Australian employee transferred to a company office in Bangkok.⁹³ He engaged in the joking style he had enjoyed with his coworkers back home—some playful teasing and light banter. It did not occur to him that his personal style could cause harm. He was in for a surprise. In Thailand, people generally prefer to keep interactions extremely polite and avoid embarrassing each other, especially at work.
 - ii. His joking, which in Australia was normal to build team spirit, made his Thai colleagues uncomfortable. They felt the constant ribbing was disrespectful and rude. The ill feelings escalated quickly. Eventually, complaints were filed, and the employee was called in by HR. In small teams or as a class, discuss this incident. If your instructor directs, write a discussion forum post or an e-mail evaluating what happened. Draw on lessons you have learned in this chapter about power distance, communication style, and low-context as well as high-context cultures. Here are a few questions to guide you:
 - What cultural differences caused the misunderstanding?
 - Could the Australian employee have acted differently? How?
 - Do you find the Thai colleagues' reaction understandable?
 - How might a company help staff adapt to a new culture?
- r. Intergenerational Clash? Five Generations at Work (Activities and Cases #18, 1-5)
- i. For the first time in history, the workforce in the United States is comprised of up to five generations,⁹⁴ so it's no surprise that each group's unique perspectives have organizations hustling to adjust to this new phenomenon. A variety of factors come into play when different aged people are thrown together. After all, historical events, personal values, and an ever-changing world affect the way each generation perceives the world and workplace.

- ii. Broadly speaking, the traditionalists (Silent Generation), born between 1924 and 1945, primarily crave respect and recognition. Baby boomers (1946–1964) believe that success at work comes only after paying one's dues. The Gen X (1965–1980) cohort led us into the age of technology and does not hesitate to switch jobs. Millennials (1981–1996) and Gen Z (1997–2012) value their free time more than work and expect praise and attention from their bosses. Conflict often arises from differing expectations regarding work-life balance, career advancement, technological skills, and communication styles.
- iii. These differences can lead to conflict. Such was the case when the venerable publisher of children's literature, Golden Books, was sold in the early 2000s. Many of the editorial staff at that time were in their fifties and sixties, either from the Silent Generation or the earliest wave of boomers. Most had been with the company decades. When the new management added several hundred recent graduates, immediate conflicts erupted and eventually led to the mass exit of veteran employees. A former HR manager later explained, "What was left was a group of high-energy amateurs that lacked the industry knowledge as well as the discipline to negotiate attractive deals with the writers." After more than 50 years in business, the company went bankrupt.
- iv. Nevertheless, currently at 36 percent of the workforce, millennials are the largest generational cohort, and the share of their younger Generation Z coworkers is growing rapidly.⁹⁶ With more mature workers retiring, organizations must adapt in order to attract and keep younger employees. It's clear that employers face a host of challenges, not the least of which is how to help people with divergent ideas work harmoniously. From boomers who want recognition for their experience to millennials and Gen Z angling for more influence, the multigenerational workforce is charting unknown territory.
- v. Student Directions:
 - a. Reflect on your own work preferences. Which aspects of work do you value? What motivates you the most? Is it work that's meaningful and the opportunity for growth? Is it compensation and perks? Have you experienced clashes in your work experience that you believe may have been generational? Discuss your actual as well as desired work experience with your classmates, and if asked, summarize your values and expectations in writing.
 - b. In class or small groups, discuss the Golden Books scenario. Could the intergenerational clashes and bankruptcy have been prevented? How can intergenerational differences be overcome? Following reflection and discussion, write up your findings at your instructor's discretion.

2. Grammar/Mechanics Checkup 1

These checkups are designed to improve student grammar and mechanics skills, which include punctuation, spelling, capitalization, and number use. The checkups systematically review all sections of the Grammar/Mechanics Handbook. You can find accompanying student resources at www.cengage.com.

a. Nouns

- i. Students should review Sections 1.02–1.06 in the Grammar/Mechanics Handbook. Then, they should select the correct form to complete each of the statements provided in the textbook. Students should record their answer and the appropriate Grammar/Mechanics section to illustrate the principle involved. When finished, students should compare their responses with those at the bottom of the page. If their answers differ, students should study carefully the principles shown in parentheses.

3. Editing Challenge 1

- a. Every chapter provides an editing exercise to fine-tune your grammar and mechanics skills. These are the skills that employers frequently find lacking in employees.
 - i. The sample e-mail requires edits in proofreading, grammar, spelling, punctuation, capitalization, word use, and number form. See the guidelines in the Grammar/Mechanics Handbook in Appendix D, including the lists of Confusing Words and Frequently Misspelled Words.
 - ii. Student Directions. Edit the sample email by (a) inserting corrections in your textbook or on a photocopy using the proofreading marks in Appendix C or (b) downloading the message from www.cengage.com and correcting on your computer using Microsoft Word Markup. Hint: You should make about 30 edits. Your instructor may ask you to use Track Changes in MS Word as you edit. Refer to the Communication Workshop in Chapter 4 for more information about using Track Changes. Your instructor may show you a possible solution.

4. Communication Workshop: Technology

- a. Job Hunting in the Digital Age: The LinkedIn Advantage
 - i. Where are the jobs? The job market has changed dramatically over the past few years, with a mix of remote, hybrid, and on-site roles now more common than ever. This has led to greater competition for some positions but also new opportunities in emerging industries. Without the usual face-to-face networking, LinkedIn and other online job search tools have become even more critical places to find and be found. Even before the shift to more remote work, surveys showed that 87 percent of recruiters worldwide use LinkedIn to locate skilled and educated candidates, and the platform is used by 92 percent of Fortune 500 companies.

- ii. Although it has significantly fewer monthly active users than Facebook, LinkedIn is the leading professional social networking site. One reason for its popularity is the 69 million companies and their millions of job openings listed there.¹⁰⁰ Other platforms, such as Glassdoor, Indeed, and emerging tools such as Handshake and ZipRecruiter, also help job seekers manage their search directly from their devices. LinkedIn is an excellent place to learn about job availability, qualifications needed, and salary expectations. If you haven't done so already, you will need to develop an effective, professional LinkedIn profile sooner or later.
- iii. Career Applications.
 1. Students should study online job advertisements in their field. What's available? How much is the salary? What are the requirements?
- iv. Student Directions:
 - Visit LinkedIn.
 - Study the opening page.
 - Select keyword, category, city, and state.
 - Study the job listings.
 - Explore popular job boards.
 - Select the best ads.
 - Analyze the skills required.

APPENDIX

GENERIC RUBRICS

Providing students with rubrics helps them understand expectations and components of assignments. Rubrics help students become more aware of their learning process and progress, and they improve students' work through timely and detailed feedback.

Customize these rubric templates as you wish. The writing rubric indicates 40 points and the discussion rubric indicates 30 points.

STANDARD WRITING RUBRIC

Criteria	Meets Requirements	Needs Improvement	Incomplete
Content	The assignment clearly and comprehensively addresses all questions in the assignment. 15 points	The assignment partially addresses some or all questions in the assignment. 8 points	The assignment does not address the questions in the assignment. 0 points
Organization and Clarity	The assignment presents ideas in a clear manner and with strong organizational structure. The assignment includes an appropriate introduction, content, and conclusion. Coverage of facts, arguments, and conclusions are logically related and consistent. 10 points	The assignment presents ideas in a mostly clear manner and with a mostly strong organizational structure. The assignment includes an appropriate introduction, content, and conclusion. Coverage of facts, arguments, and conclusions are mostly logically related and consistent. 7 points	The assignment does not present ideas in a clear manner and with strong organizational structure. The assignment includes an introduction, content, and conclusion, but coverage of facts, arguments, and conclusions are not logically related and consistent. 0 points
Research	The assignment is based upon appropriate and adequate academic literature, including peer reviewed journals and other scholarly work. 5 points	The assignment is based upon adequate academic literature but does not include peer reviewed journals and other scholarly work. 3 points	The assignment is not based upon appropriate and adequate academic literature and does not include peer reviewed journals and other scholarly work. 0 points
References/ Works Cited	The assignment follows the required citation guidelines. 5 points	The assignment follows some of the required citation guidelines. 3 points	The assignment does not follow the required citation guidelines. 0 points
Grammar and Spelling	The assignment has two or fewer grammatical and spelling errors. 5 points	The assignment has three to five grammatical and spelling errors. 3 points	The assignment is incomplete or unintelligible. 0 points
